

A genealogical profile of Henry Howland

Birth: Henry Howland was born about 1603, probably in Fen Stanton, Huntingdonshire.

Death: He died on January 1, 1670/1, in Duxbury.

Ship: Unknown, 1632

Life in England: Henry Howland was the son of Henry Howland and Margaret (—) of Fen Stanton, one of six children. His older brother Humphrey was a member of the Drapers' Company of London. Their brother Simon was apprenticed to Humphrey in 1622 and made free of the company on March 24, 1629. Henry was apprenticed to Humphrey on October 1, 1623, but apparently never finished his apprenticeship.

Life in New England: Henry Howland first appeared in Plymouth records in the 1633 list of Plymouth freemen. He moved to Duxbury in 1636. Henry Howland served on many juries and was the Duxbury surveyor of highways in 1656 and 1668. By December 22, 1657, he was a Quaker sympathizer and had allowed religious meetings in his house, which was against the law. He continued to behave as a Quaker "or manifest encourager of such" and ultimately was disenfranchised on October 6, 1659.

Family: Henry Howland married Mary _____ by 1628, assuming she was the mother of all his children, and had eight children. She died on June 16, 1674, in Duxbury.

Where do I go from here?

Researching your family's history can be a fun, rewarding, and occasionally frustrating project. Start with what you know by collecting information on your immediate family. Then, trace back through parents, grandparents, and beyond. This is a great opportunity to speak to relatives, gather family stories, arrange and identify old family photographs, and document family possessions that have been passed down from earlier generations.

Once you have learned all you can from family members, you will begin to discover other sources. A wide variety of records can help you learn more about the lives of your ancestors. These include birth, marriage, and death records; immigration and naturalization records; land records; census records; probate records and wills; church and cemetery records; newspapers; passenger lists; military records; and much more.

When you use information from any source — an original record, a printed book, or a website — always be careful to document it. If you use a book, you should cite the author or compiler, the full title, publication information and pages used. Also be sure to record the author's sources for the information. If the author's sources aren't provided, you will have to try to find the original source. Many genealogical works contain faulty information, and the Internet also contains many inaccuracies. In order for your work to be accepted — by lineage societies and other genealogists — it must be properly documented.
